THE DALLAS PETROLEUM CLUB THE BEGINNINGS AND THE EARLY YEARS

Almost since Spring, 1934, Dallas Wildcat Committee members, a group of oil men, had been talking about forming a local petroleum club. There were a number of meetings, plenty of suggestions, but no action.

Dallas was emerging from its cocoon as an oil city. The great East Texas field was pretty well defined by now and gradually the major city on the Trinity became its headquarters. Yet - Big D had assumed no definite form as an oil capital. In Texas parlance it had the makin's. Something gluey was needed to fasten the flesh to the bones and get going.

So one day at the old B&B Cafe on Akard, three Wildcatters decided to do something about it. One was big Carl Young, director of standardization for American Petroleum Institute, and adept organizer. Another was Russell S. McFarland, head of Seaboard Oil Co., meticulous, exacting. A third was Harry Moss, local independent, with a penchant for getting things done. They invited Jack Pew, Sun Oil's personable, able executive to join deliberations. R. B. Whitehead, chief geologist for Atlantic Refining Co., Mustang Club mentor and a whirling dervish around whom whirlpools of activity were continually circling, was added to the team.

These men were in the lead to provide Dallas with a lodestone which would attract prospective or already successful oil men. An added incentive was the scheduled annual November meeting here of the American Petroleum Institute. Dallas, as host, would attract worldwide attention. The situation called for an organized greeting.

Whitehead, Wildcat chairman, called his group together on July 25 and plans were outlined for a petroleum club. On August 3 a list of possible members was submitted and on August 6 a location was discussed. The Wildcats sent invitations to eligible prospects on October 4. Sixty-seven paid initiation fees. On October 18 organization plans were perfected and the steering committee was authorized to sign an agreement with the Baker Hotel to construct club quarters in the grill adjacent to Peacock Terrace at a rental of $6000 annually.

The first board of directors for the new Petroleum Club consisted of D.A. Little, Jack Pew, Harry Bass, J.F. Lucey, Harry Morlang, C.A. Young, R.S. McFarland, R.H. Morrison, D. Harold Byrd, H.S. Moss, W.H. Francis and R.B. Whitehead. Directors named Little President, McFarland Vice President, Whitehead Vice President and Morlang Secretary-Treasurer. These officers remained two years.

By-laws were drawn by W.H. Francis. T.L. Foster and Woodall Rodgers prepared papers of incorporation and made application for a charter. The latter stated that: "The purpose for which the Club was formed is: The support and maintenance of an educational undertaking for the improvement and development of the human mind, through reading, discussion, exchange of ideas, lectures, information, social contacts and all other means that will contribute to such educational improvement and development of the members of the Club."

The nation's economy was full of holes as the new organization gathered momentum. A giant Depression, still snarling, was slowly retreating. 10-cent oil, recently a fact, left shivering memories. Expenses ran into the red and new members had to be recruited.

The first annual party, marking the formal opening of the new Club, was held February 9, 1935, in the club rooms and Peacock Terrace. There was a buffet, no regular hour for service, no decorations except a miniature derrick on each table, a sort of 'ya'll come' affair. Each member and guest was charged $1.50 per plate and the club donated an extra dollar. The next year an oil boom was created along the east wall of Peacock Terrace with scenes painted by a local artist. From these beginnings the annual party grew and assumed stature.

A ground-floor lease was made with the Adolphus Hotel in 1940 for a beautiful paneled lounge and a magnificent dining room. In 1950, a new addition was begun on the east side of the Baker Hotel and the Club opened quarters there November 17, 1952. Finally, on April 1, 1965, stakes were pulled again and the once lusty infant, now matured and flourishing, moved into the 48th and 49th floors of the new First National Bank building.

In the many components in a drop of oil that contribute to its end products, some defy laboratory analysis. One of these is human relationships. A scintillating membership enjoyed a togetherness in the early days that had the flavor of a college fraternity. When oil advanced 5-cents a barrel, eyes glistened; when it lost a stride, gloom thickened.

Many stalwarts of those days have vanished down the long, long trail. Minute books are filled with resolution of condolence to families and friends.

There was a steady influx of new members as the nation passed into the stimulation of a new decade. More room was needed. A deal with the Trammell Crow Co. produced space on the 39th and 40th floors of the newly constructed Texas Commerce Tower, and provided quarters that ranked favorably with the best in the land. A loyal group of employees added the finishing touches!

There has been an evolution in Club aims, a broadening into channels other than just oil. It is a new era, a new outlook for a healthy, energetic Club holding proudly to a distinguished past as it looks ahead to its 60th year, faith in its heart, toward as notable a future.
